We all know how much children love and respond to music, but science is now showing us concretely that music is very very good for children! We now know that practicing music in early childhood can influence cognitive and emotional development throughout your child's lifetime.

Joan Koenig designed the Baby Musiking curriculum. She is a professional musician, the founder of the Ecole Koenig, and is passionate about music, neuroscience and early childhood.

Her book "The Musical Child" will be available at Houghton Mifflin

Harcourt publishers in 2020.
